You probably know that many of the world’s plants and animals are in danger of extinction, but did you know that many human languages are in danger of becoming extinct, too?

Globalization has helped to make the world a smaller place. But it has also contributed to the loss of many languages around the world. Now only 10 languages make up over half the world population’s mother languages. Once there were about 8000 different languages spoken on our planet. Now there are only about 6500, and half of them are endangered. In fact, every two weeks another language disappears forever!

Languages are important. They do much more than help people communicate. A language helps define a culture, history and ancestry of a group of people. Once a language is lost, humanity loses a part of our rich culture and heritage. Preserving endangered languages is important to keep traditions alive.

UNESCO promotes events and activities on International Mother Language Day on February 21 to help encourage the recognition and celebration of the diverse heritage of humanity’s mother tongues, especially minority ones, and to raise awareness about the need to preserve endangered languages. The Day provides a wonderful opportunity to discover and celebrate the rich diversity of languages spoken in our own communities.

"Language is a city to the building of which every human being brought a stone."
-- Ralph Waldo Emerson

"In making a speech one must study three points: first, the means of producing persuasion; second, the language; third the proper arrangement of the various parts of the speech."

-- Aristotle
"Every legend, moreover, contains its residuum of truth, and the root function of language is to control the universe by describing it."

-- James Baldwin
"Like music and art, love of nature is a common language that can transcend political or social boundaries."

~ Jimmy Carter
"Language is a process of free creation; its laws and principles are fixed, but the manner in which the principles of generation are used is free and infinitely varied. Even the interpretation and use of words involves a process of free creation." -- Noam Chomsky
"There's an aspect of human nature in which we want to think we're better than somebody else. They're a different color. They speak a different language. They have a different name for the Creator. Whatever it is, that makes it okay for me to hate them, to try to get some of their land or some of their resources."

~ John Denver
"Most of the fundamental ideas of science are essentially simple, and may, as a rule, be expressed in a language comprehensible to everyone."
-- Albert Einstein
"Real change comes when people are enabled to use their thinking and their energy in a new way, using a different system of thought, different language, and having fresh visions of the future."

-- Scilla Elworthy
"Language is a city to the building of which every human being brought a stone."
~ Ralph Waldo Emerson
"Music happens to be an art form that transcends language."
-- Herbie Hancock

"Every individual is at once the beneficiary and the victim of the linguistic tradition into which he has been born..."
~ Aldous Huxley
"To every obstacle oppose patience, perseverance and soothing language."
-- Thomas Jefferson
“Occasionally in life there are those moments of unutterable fulfillment which cannot be completely explained by those symbols called words. Their meanings can only be articulated by the inaudible language of the heart.”

-- Martin Luther King, Jr
"If you talk to a man in a language he understands, that goes to his head. If you talk to him in his language, that goes to his heart."

-- Nelson Mandela
The only language men ever speak perfectly is the one they learn in babyhood, when no one can teach them anything!"
— Maria Montessori
"I thought it was respectful to each country to sing in their language."
-- Nana Mouskouri
"We are at a time in our country's history that inclusive language is better than exclusive language."
-- Barack Obama
"I remain convinced that obstinate addiction to ordinary language in our private thoughts is one of the main obstacles to progress in philosophy."
-- Bertrand Russell
“Any classification according to a singular identity polarizes people in a particular way, but if we take note of the fact that we have many different identities - related not just to religion but also to language, occupation and business, politics, class and poverty, and many others - we can see that the polarization of one can be resisted by a fuller picture. So knowledge and understanding are extremely important to fight against singular polarization.”

-- Amartya Sen
